

Help Document Calendar

By: Matt M.

A calendar on the internet is the same thing like one at home. You can add dates to it, remember plans, and especially know what day it is. There are many sites you can use to get an account. But there should be one on your email if you don't think you have one.

When you have an account like Gmail, there should be a button on it that says calendar and that will allow you to click on it. Once you click on it you will be able to type notes or memos on it so you don't forget if you have something important to do or what to go to. But the down side of it is that it wouldn't beep or make a noise when you have something. But it is still good to use to not forget anything important. If thought you have to find one on the internet you have to create an account for. You need to put in some info in it and then you are done.

This is a calendar on Gmail. It is an example what you can do on it like add notes or dates to it. And you can get one on the internet by creating an account by putting in info.
